

From: Alexey Marushevsky
Re: Senior Channel Marketing Manager, DACH · Zero
Trust

Dear Akamai team,

I come from physical security: Boon Edam Security Solutions. Same channel economics as cybersecurity: long cycles, technical pre-sales, trust-dependent relationships. The product changes. The system that makes partners perform does not.

I believe in giving partners everything they need to succeed: campaigns, content, positioning, research. Everything with the AI speed and scale.

Partners' job is the one thing that cannot be automated - Human touch: showing up, building the relationship, closing the deal. And create Value for end-users for sure.

The pages below contain my three perspectives on partner channel development: both as a methodology and as exemplary cases for the Akamai DACH market.

Each perspective is built out with real artifacts: scoring models, partner profiles, competitive maps, branded collateral, a KPI dashboard. All from public sources.

Please find a moment to have a look.

Main: sapraudnynew.github.io/partner-program-os

Three perspectives inside:

Method: 7-stage partner lifecycle. Maturity model with 21 checkpoints. → partner-program-os/method

Partner Mapping: 33 DACH security partners scored across 6 dimensions. Five prioritized. → partner-program-os/partner-mapping

ABSM Sprint: Four German target manufacturers researched to account level. 12 branded PDFs. CRM spec. Dashboard. → partner-program-os/absm-sprint

My CV is attached separately.

With kind regards,

Alexey
+31 6 25 404 399